

DECISIVE RUSS VICTORY MAY EFFECT RESULT OF CONFLICT IN THE WEST

GREAT ARMY OF CZAR CONTINUES ITS ONWARD MARCH THROUGH AUSTRIA.

BATTLE IS STILL RAGING

German Reported Falling Back on Their Base of Supplies in Fighting in Northern France Today.

Exultant messages from Petrograd and admissions of disaster from Vienna, indicate that the long series of military misfortune marking the history of the dual monarchy are about to be capped with an unparalleled debacle which may not only open the road to Berlin, but bring Austria to sue for peace.

The armies in the west seem as if pausing to watch the fateful drama in Galicia, the outcome of which may have a tremendous effect on the plans of the invaders in the eastern theatre of war as well as upon the allies themselves in that region.

The news from Belgium indicates that the Germans are rushing reinforcements southward.

A dispatch from Belgium relates that the German force that has been waiting outside of Ghent for the levee of provisions demanded from that city, has left hurriedly in a southeasterly direction.

England has looked hopefully for the Russian "steam roller" to get under way, but the impetus which the Russian army in the eastern theatre of war already has acquired has surprised even the military experts.

The movement of the Russian advance has been so speedy that the German division advancing on the Vistula are hardly likely to arrive in time to assist their sorely pressed ally in Galicia.

Reports from Petrograd indicate that the Russian armies already are driving the Germans before them on the western banks of the Vistula. In this region the only base left for a rallying point for the Austrian and German forces is Cracow, the old capital of the kingdom of Poland.

If this place falls before the onslaught of the Russians, it is felt in London that the annihilation of the Austro-German armies in the southeast may result.

Petrograd, via London, Sept. 9. 656. Sept. 10.—A dispatch from Tokyo states that Japan had joined the agreement of the allies not to con-

TO BESIEGE PARIS; SUBJUGATE FRANCE; FRENCH TO SUFFER

New German Minister to Mexico Tells of Emperor's Plans—Friendly Overtures to Republic Unheeded.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Sept. 10.—Straight from a long talk with the German Emperor in Berlin, H. von Eckhardt, the new German minister to Mexico asserted today that the Emperor had no thought of abandoning his plans to besiege Paris. That a German army would take the city and that all France would be subjugated by the German arms, "not to keep it always but to destroy forever the menace of French militarism."

Just before leaving Berlin for Rotterdam he saw Emperor William and had a twenty minutes talk with him during which he said the Emperor discussed the war with France, its untimely close and the campaign in the field and outlined what Germany hoped to achieve. The German ruler was then about to depart for the front.

The Emperor has been trying for many years to win the friendship of France. Von Eckhardt said. "I have made friendly overtures for the French again and again, but apparently Germany failed to win their good will. Now the attitude of Germany is that we must take France or die. The German army must fight in the very last man. We must take Paris and subjugate the French army."

U. S. IS PROTECTED BY PEACE TREATIES

Great Britain, France, Spain and China Agree to Sign Commission Treaties With the States.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, September 10.—In the name of the European Great Britain, France, Spain and China have agreed to sign peace commission treaties with the United States. One effect of the new convention would be to prevent the United States from being drawn suddenly into the conflict. Germany, Russia and Japan have signified their acceptance of the principles of these treaties, though negotiations have not advanced to the point of drafting conventions.

AUTOMOBILE THIEVES CAPTURED AT BELOIT

Two Chicago Men, Who Discarded Car at Afton, Taken Back to Chicago on Larceny Warrant.

Two men, named John Gessler and Henry Martin, were arrested yesterday afternoon in Beloit by Officer Floyd Carter for the theft of an automobile, which had been abandoned at Afton, Wis., on Wednesday morning on the highway near the village.

The two men were taken into custody and on being questioned by the Beloit authorities, confessed to stealing the auto in Chicago and running it to Afton. Fearing arrest, the machine was discarded, the license number torn off and thrown into the bushes by the men, who walked to Beloit in an attempt to get out of the county. A Chicago message confirmed the fact that the car had been stolen and Gessler and Martin were charged with larceny by a warrant issued at Chicago. Both men were taken to Chicago this morning to stand trial on the charge.

Canada Is Awake—Are We?

Every industrial fibre in our good Canadian neighbor is already tingling with hope and courage. Canada is shaking her grain and farm products to Europe—she is starting her mills and factories.

She sees in the war a duty and an opportunity. It is ours to share in even greater proportion. The world markets are open to the Canadian material—the men—the money—and we are getting the ships.

Don't sit around waiting to see what is going to happen—it has happened.

EMPEROR WILLIAM PROTESTS AGAINST DUM DUM BULLETS

German Head Sends Message to President Woodrow Wilson, Objecting Methods Used by French.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, September 10.—The correspondent of the Daily Mail at Rotterdam has telegraphed the text of a message sent by Emperor William to President Wilson under date of Sept. 4. It is as follows:

"I consider it my duty, Sir, to inform you as the most notable representative of the principles of humanity that after the capture of the French fort of Longwy, my troops found in that place a quantity of dum dum bullets which had been manufactured in special works by the French government. Such bullets were found not only in French killed and wounded soldiers and on French prisoners, but also on English troops. You know what terrible wounds and awful suffering are caused by these bullets and that their use is strictly forbidden by the generally recognized rules of international law."

"I solemnly protest to you against the way in which this war is being waged by our opponents, whose method is making it one of the most barbarous in history."

"Besides the use of these awful weapons, the Belgian government has incited the civil population to participate in the fighting and has for a long time carefully organized their resistance. The cruellest practices in this gorilla warfare even by women and priests toward wounded soldiers and doctors and hospital nurses, were such that eventually my general measures to punish the guilty and frighten the blood thirsty population from continuing their shameful deeds."

"Some villages and even the old town of Louvaine with the exception of its beautiful town hall, Hotel de Ville, had to be destroyed for the protection of my troops. My heart bleeds when I think of the many who have lost their homes, and the misdeeds of many. Signed, William I."

FEDERAL INCOME TAX LAW IS CONSIDERED

Denver, Colo., Sept. 10.—The strength and weak points of the Federal income tax law were discussed by national tax experts today at the fifth session of the eighth annual conference of the National Tax Association which convened here on Tuesday.

Among those who were scheduled to deliver addresses were Frank Trumbull, chairman of the board of the Chesapeake & Ohio railway, and the Missouri, Kansas & Texas road; A. C. Reardon of New York City and Representative Cordell Hull of Tennessee, author of the income tax law. It was expected that an official of the Treasury Department would speak as the official representative of the Federal government. At the sixth session this afternoon the delegates heard miscellaneous reports of committees.

"Efficiency Session"—the program called for addresses by Dr. John Coulter, of the Federal Census Bureau; Dr. William H. Allen, of the Bureau of Municipal Research, New York City, the most important subject to be discussed was that on public expenditures. T. S. Adams, state tax commissioner of Wisconsin, as chairman, will deliver the report of the committee of the association on increase of public expenditures.

SERVIANS INVADING AUSTRIAN FRONTIER; SUFFER HEAVY LOSS

Servian Troops Cross River Save in Enemy's Country—Austrians Check Advance at Belgrade.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Nish, Servia, September 10.—An official communication issued here today declared that large numbers of Servian troops crossed the river Save, which marks the boundary between Servia and Hungary from Belgrade to the Bosnian frontier between September 5 and 6, and are advancing satisfactorily into the enemy's territory. One detachment was attempting to cross the Save encountered strong resistance from a much superior force and was compelled to retire. Part of this detachment was captured. Another detachment was engaged into the enemy's territory near Belgrade.

Servian and Montenegrin armies, which continue to have taken Foch in Bosnia, early in the south-east of Sarajevo and thrown back the enemy to the left bank of the Drina. The attempt of the enemy to cross the Drina near its confluence with the Save failed completely. The Austrians suffering heavy losses.

A fair sized house greeted "The Un-derdog" drama dealing with the biological questions of the hour. The story or plot of this play was one of love, error, pity and pride, for-ting with sane happiness in a happy home life. The action was rapid, clean cut and with thrilling situations. The scene was crisp, humorous, earnest and life and characters particularly good as Lard, Mc-Donald, the good warden who believed in the prisoners as men and not animals. Williams, the ward heel-er and political crook, was nicely played by Arthur Rooney. FERVENT PATRIOTISM STIRS ALL GERMANY

MISS ERMA SHOEMAKER WHO WITNESSED MOBILIZATION TELLS OF GERMAN WAR SPIRIT.

CONTRAST IN ENGLAND

Relying Upon Strength of Navy Brit- ish Display No Eagerness to Fight in European Conflict.

Germany's preparedness to go to war and the fervent patriotism of the German people in the hour of national peril stand out strongly as the pre- dominant characteristics in the re- cent mobilization of troops, according to Miss Erma Shoemaker, who was in southern Germany for more than two weeks after war was declared. Miss Shoemaker arrived in this city last night after an arduous twelve-day voy- age across the Atlantic and a wearis- some railroad journey from Quebec. She was one of the twenty-four young women who made up the party in charge of Prof. Haertel of the Wiscon- sin university.

The Haertel party was at Nurem- burg, Bavaria, when they first learned of the impending hostilities. This was on July 21st, and they left Nurem- burg immediately for Munich, nearly a hundred miles further south. Here they remained until Aug. 21st, when they secured accommodations on one of the German special trains provided to transport American tour- ists out of the country, arriving in Amsterdam, Holland, after a tiresome journey of three days and two nights. They secured passage across the Eng- lish Channel without difficulty and once in London, their worries were over as they were fortunate in hav- ing their transportation reserved for them on the Allen line boat, Sicilian, which sailed from London on Aug. 27th.

Spending so long a time in Germany in the midst of the war excitement, Miss Shoemaker had abundant oppor- tunity to see the manner in which the Kaiser's people went to war. The predicament of her party caused her no undue anxiety for they were well provided for and experienced no real hardships. The Germans treated all American tourists with the utmost consideration and assisted them in every possible way, according to Miss Shoemaker, who is an ardent German sympathizer as a result of her expe- rience. Although the members of the Haertel party were not overwrought, they made daily trips to the American consul's office in quest of any news which might filter through as the ac- celeration of the war, according to Miss Shoemaker, who is an ardent German sympathizer as a result of her expe- rience. GERMAN RESERVISTS ANSWER KAISER'S CALL; HASTEN TO FRONT dent that the war will last at least a winter," said Miss Shoemaker. "If you go into the shops you will find the clerks busy with their knitting. They are not waiting on customers. In the homes they are laying in supplies to last them, while their men folk are at the front."

"A few days after the mobilization call was issued, one could notice the dearth of men on the streets of Munich," Miss Shoemaker continued. "All had gone to the front. The women and children, the old men and the feeble were all that were left. There was plenty of worry and anx- iety. Not a home, it seemed, that had not sent a husband, father or brother. All were eager from the scene of hos- tilities. At every station on our trip down the Rhine valley were crowds of anxious watchers waiting for the wounded, hoping to get news which did not come. The Germans know very little of what is going on. News in the newspapers is scarce and Ger- man 'foresight' is exercised on every side."

"Our party never ventured on the streets of Munich without each one wearing an American flag. All were armed with passports. Some tourists who were negligent in this respect were arrested and taken to the police stations where they were searched and questioned. There was extreme vigilance everywhere as the authori- ties were suspicious that all strangers might be spies. But there were no indignities and Americans were treat- ed with the utmost consideration if they behaved themselves."

In marked contrast was the wartime scene which Miss Shoemaker saw when she arrived in England. There the hustle and bustle was utterly lacking. The British seemed care- less, almost indifferent about the war. They had the greatest faith in their navy which they felt confident would amply look after their interests. What few soldiers were seen were far infer- ior to the Germans. They seemed to lack discipline, energy and above all the patriotic war spirit which stirred the Kaiser's men. At the London forts handfuls of men were training, but their tactics seemed pathetic when compared with the German soldiers, so well trained and so energetic. In London Miss Shoemaker noted the appeals for more men displayed everywhere on the streets, in the omnibuses and on the building, "Lord Kitchener needs 100,000 soldiers." "Fight for your country and your King," were some of the appeals. There were no such advertisements in Germany. All were ready to go; there was no hanging back; Germany re- sponded to a man. The British defend- ed themselves by saying that the Germans were forced to fight, but that was only begging the issue. If the truth be known the Germans are eager for war; there is no indifference or nonchalance.

While in London Miss Shoemaker and the rest of the Haertel party had ample time for sight seeing and en- joyed themselves to the utmost. "We saw no suffragettes," said Miss Shoemaker, "we heard on the continent that they were fighting to enlist, but they are conspicuous by their absence. On account of their subdued state we were able to see many of the museums and galleries which have been closed on account of their pernicious activity. We saw the royal jewels which have not been displayed before in years. The trip across the Atlantic was an arduous one taking twelve days. The vessel took a northern route and was dark at all times. It was accompanied out of the English channel by four warships which stayed with them for a day. They were caught in a fog near the scene of the Titanic's sinking and the captain stopped the boat for some twenty-four hours as a precau- tion against icebergs which could be seen in every direction when the mist cleared away.

Miss Shoemaker is enthusiastic over her visit to Europe and in no way regrets that she had such war-time experiences. She expects to take up her work as teacher in the Edgerton high school next week.

Miss Shoemaker was graduated from the local high school and secured her A. B. degree from Beloit college in 1912.

Champion Welsh Signs for a Milwaukee Bout Against Unnamed Fighter. Notes by the Boxers.

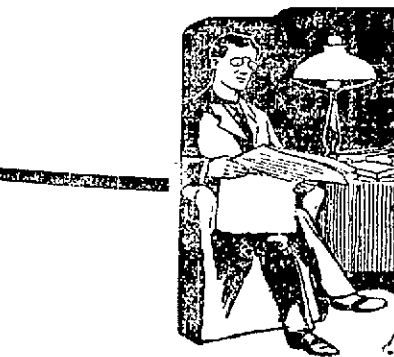

By Strikes. Freddie Welsh, the English champion, who has been in the States for some time, has just signed a contract with the Milwaukee Athletic Club for a bout on Labor day. The bout will be staged in Milwaukee for the first time, and the champion Welsh will appear in a Cream City match.

Hand in hand with the gladness of the fact that Welsh will defend his title over here, comes the fact that the bout will be a real one, and the champion Welsh will be in a real fight.

Ad Wolgast has arrived in Milwaukee to start training for his match with Mandot on the eighteenth and the former champ is as enthusiastic as ever over his chances on coming back and meeting Ritchie again.

Mike Gibbons the St. Paul phantom welter earned his right to claim for a bout with Jimmy Clabby for the middleweight crown when he gave "Rockbottom" Brown an artistic thrashing in ten rounds at Benton Harbor, Gibbons, by reports, won by a wide margin that he is in a really situation, a claim in the middleweight, and found him a hard one to crack and a real boxing lesson by the champion Gibbons.

Cubs Are Beaten But Slip Only Half a Game—Situation Changes Little Since Yesterday.

The National league race is little changed since yesterday's percentage of a game better off today by virtue of the Braves' victory over the Giants, and the crushing of the Boston Red Sox by the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Brooklyn-Giant clash resulted in a victory for the former by a 3 to 0 count. O'Toole, hurling for the McGraws, was hammered hard for 14 hits, while Egan allowed but six.

The Cubs, when entered into the league race, still present a different situation, one which is undeniably edifying to the minds of many.

LINCOLN BEACHEY'S STUNTS ARE TO BE THRILLING

King of the Air to Loop the Loop, Fly Upside Down and Perform Other Feats.

When Lincoln Beachey, king of the air, pilots his space eating aeroplane around or rather above the Beloit Fair Grounds next Sunday, September 13, while racing against a high powered racing car piloted by Barney Oldfield, the noted automobile driver, lovers of extreme speed will gasp with astonishment.

inventors and writers regarding his wonderful career.

Thomas A. Edison, America's greatest inventor, declares that he considers Lincoln Beachey's loop-the-loop and upside down flight the greatest contribution to science since the Wright Brothers first flew a heavier than air machine some six or seven years ago.

Here is a reflection of the impression Beachey's marvelous loop the loop and upside down flying feats made on Albert Hubbard.

"Each art has its master worker, its Faderweek, its St. Gardens, its Milton. There is music and poetry in flight by man in the heavens, and Lincoln Beachey is the greatest artist of the aeroplane. His flying is the same delicacy of touch, the same inspiration of genius of Faderweek and Milton."

BADGER FOOTBALL SQUAD GETS READY

Wisconsin Gridiron Stars Will Assemble for First Practice a Week From Today.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Sept. 10.—One week from today the Wisconsin football squad will assemble for preliminary work incident to the opening of the 1914 season. The coaches will come next Tuesday. The first game will be with Lawrence college at Madison on October 3.

FOOTBALL CALL AT JANESVILLE HIGH ISSUED BY COACH

Curtis Makes No Predictions As To Prospects—Material Looks Better Than in 1913.

The call for football candidates for the 1914 Janesville high school eleven has been made by Coach Guy W. Curtis. His declaration was made for this afternoon, but the drizzling rain kept the men under cover, at least the majority of position seekers.

The first meet will be held at Minneapolis late in October. The first intercollegiate meet will be held at Chicago (probably) Nov. 14.

Sport Snap Shots

President James E. Gaffney, of the Boston Nationals, has expressed keen delight over the acquisition of Outfielder Herbie Moran.

"Stallings has been after that fellow for more than a year," said the owner of the Braves. "He tried desperately to get him from Charles H. Ebbetts before the latter sold Moran to Cincinnati."

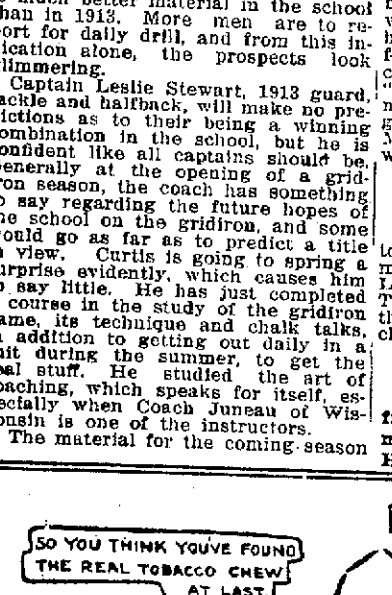

Here is the sort of ball the Athletics play, the note being taken from an account of one of the games of the recent series with the Detroit Tigers: "By breaking up the double steal in the seventh the Athletics saved one or more runs. It is a favorite Mack trick. With Cobb on third and Crawford on first, the steal was tried. Collins ran in from the base with Barry behind. Collins acted as if he were going to return the throw to Schang to get Cobb. This deceived Crawford, who sloped up. But Collins outstepped Sam by ducking and letting the ball shoot on to Barry, who tagged the plate."

No wonder Jack Johnson is or was ambitious to go to the front as a French soldier. Jack is a big, powerful man. He has no more to get more gold. Since the war, the European fight game is on the blink, and even if it wasn't it is doubtful if Jack could lure a crowd out to see him perform since his last set to with Frank Moran.

AMUSEMENTS

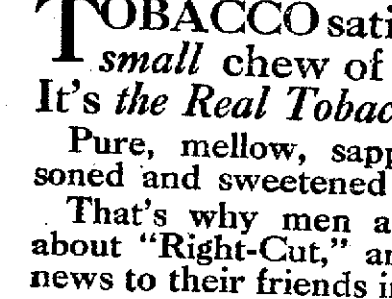

AT THE APOLLO

Jeannette Adler and her sextette of beauties will be the feature vaudeville offering at the Apollo for the balance of the week. They are down for an instrumental and singing specialty, along the cabaret lines. The "girls" play a piano, violin, cello, cor Anglais, and bass drums, while the greater part of the singing is done by Miss Adler herself, who is credited with possessing a fine soprano voice.

"The Littlest Rebel." The failure of the booking agency to get the films here for yesterday has made it necessary to postpone "The Littlest Rebel" until next Tuesday.

TOBACCO satisfied—a clean, small chew of "Right-Cut." It's the Real Tobacco Chew.

Pure, mellow, sappy tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough. That's why men are glad to hear about "Right-Cut," and to tell the glad news to their friends in turn.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is "The Real Tobacco Chew." That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary casid tobacco floors. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

SOMETHING TO TELL ABOUT.

"I am ever so nice of you to take me. It was a lovely ride and it will give me something to write home about."

So my neighbor's visitor, whom I had the pleasure of entertaining one afternoon, thanked me, and I smiled inwardly at her naïvely trusting of a feeling which enters so largely into most of our pleasures. For though few of us are so frank about it, even to ourselves, the thought that this is something that we can write or tell others about gives us a large part of our enjoyment of various pleasures.

People were permitted to go to Europe on the condition that they should not write a single post card or letter during the whole trip, should never mention it afterwards, never say "When I was in Europe," I think that half of the tourists who now make the grand tour would stay right at home.

Not write post cards indeed! It is unthinkable. The souvenir post card has been the most delightful outlet ever invented for this age-old feeling. When souvenir cards first came into existence and were comparatively rare, we hunted up the picture of some famous spot which we had seen and sent it to our friends with the impressive information, "Saw this today. Wish you were here." Then souvenir cards became more common and we had the still greater pleasure of sending a picture of our hotel to the stay-at-homes with our room number and an "X." And when the finished white-you-wait picture post cards of one of our famous spots, Plymouth Rock or the Blarney Stone—for a background, proving beyond controversy that we had actually "been there," came into being, that was the last right thing. The future may hold something better than this but is hard to imagine what it may be.

The thought of telling one's friends about it afterwards will give zest not only to the pleasant but even to the disagreeable experience, provided only it can be made to sound alluring to the telling.

Once upon a time a party of tourists left the beautiful southern seaport when they were stopping and spent a day travelling inward to see a big ocean plantation. They chose an unusually hot day and came back, dishevelled and tired with the utter exhaustion that such a trip entails.

"Did you have a good time?" asked the hotel clerk as they stopped for their keys.

They expressed their disapproval. "Never mind," said the hotel clerk, who was something of a human nature student, "when you get home and someone serves you a cup of cocoa you can say, 'I've been where the beans that make this stuff grow and picked them off the trees.'"

Which was after all just the reason most of those people had taken that excursion.

If one were ever tempted to envy Adam and Eve their Eden one should write or tell what a good time they were having. And what would Eden be without that privilege?

had nothing to mark it out as different from its neighbors. She had a large bed of pansies in the side yard every year, for, as she expressed it: "It seems to make me stop and think of the Creator and his wonderful plan of life in general just to see the thoughtful looking little faces nodding up at me." She was not the housekeeper that her neighbor was. But she could cook and keep a home so that a man was always willing to hang up his hat at six o'clock and not take it down after supper. Her place was the stamping ground for the children (she had none of her own), and if there was a sick baby in the neighborhood she was sent for before the doctor. When the stork left a new-comer at a home where babies were plentiful and money was scarce, it was Mrs. Dash who leaned above the cradle, with a look in her eyes that the pale-faced woman in the bed could not forget and said: "You lucky woman!"

Her journeys into other homes did not leave time for her to be a member of the advisory board. She had that blessed little knack of seeing the person you earnestly striving to be, instead of the poor weak creature you really were and she never hesitated to say a cheery, encouraging word. When you stop to think of this trait you will have to admit it is a commonplace one. In fact, it could be patented, for while it is not entirely new, it is scarce.

Mrs. Dash was known—and loved.

The Kitchen Cabinet

Give to your enemy forgiveness. Give to your opponent tolerance. Give to your friend your heart. Give to your child a good example. Give to your parents deference. Give to everybody sunshine.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

A whisk broom used in the bed is a most agreeable help in removing crumbs if dropped in the bed while feeding the invalid.

Paper plates used for animal pets will be a great help to the dishwasher. Plates should be kept very clean that are used for pets. For one thing it is a good habit formed, for they will not be so apt to eat unclean food in other places. Paper plates which may be bought by the hundreds and burned after using, will save soiled and unsightly dishes standing around for pets.

A simple way to apply a hot compress when the weight of a hot water bottle is too much is to heat thick folded flannel and keep changing when they become too cool.

To save good stockings from being torn at the top where the supporter is fastened, bind a piece of ribbon on the edge of the hose in which to put the supporter fastenings.

To prevent draw strings from pulling out, fasten them in the middle with a few stitches to the garment, then they can be drawn up both ways but will not come out.

A feeding cup which may be bought in any ten-cent store is a great convenience when giving an invalid liquid food. Care must be used that it is not served too fast from the spout, or the sick one will strangle.

For those too weak to hold a magazine or book a story pasted on heavy manilla paper will be a great comfort, for they can handle it without help.

When very disagreeable medicine must be taken a piece of ice held in the mouth a moment before it will dull the sense of taste so that it may be swallowed with comfort.

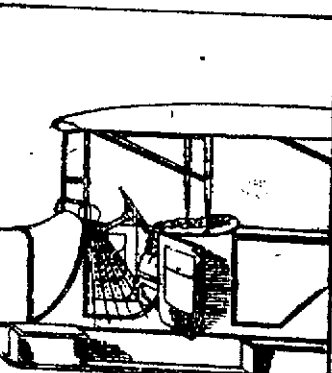

In one family where the work is divided among four house members, one gets breakfast and washes the dinner dishes, another attends to the other housework, a third gets dinner, and washes the supper dishes, the fourth gets supper and washes the breakfast dishes. Once a week each has her allotted portion and the next, the work is changed, so that each has all the experience once in four weeks.

for the purpose of illuminating the step of the carriage or automobile to which the new device is applied. In the construction of the lamp means are provided for the purpose of directing this beam to the exact spot where there might be the greatest need for it, such as the step of the car, to facilitate the entrance and exit of passengers.

The Awakening of Peggy

Peggy Gets a View of Another Girl's Life Problem.

Peggy found on going back to her father's office that her point of view had changed considerably since she spent a week there, addressing envelopes. Her interest in the former stay had been rather superficial ones, she confessed to herself. Her chief concern then had been to steal away from Miss Clarke one of her father's helpers, the attentions of a young man in the office.

Peggy now felt that she was going to school—life's school. She meant to learn what she could of the problems of those who work from her father down. Devoting only part of her time to the enterprise, she could hardly undertake a regular round of duties, and she did not feel like asking her father to give her a salary under the circumstances. She determined to make herself as useful as she could, and to watch.

During the first afternoon, a girl came in. She was a tired-looking girl with a worn, disappointed expression. Peggy advanced to meet her.

"Could I speak to Mr. Gray?" the girl asked, rather timidly. Her lack of confidence and her general manner seemed to intimate her errand.

"On what subject?" asked Peggy, pleasantly.

"I am looking for a position," replied the girl. "Maybe Mr. Gray can give me something. I have been all over town, but I haven't had any luck."

"Tell me more about yourself," said Peggy, sympathetically. "Mr. Gray is busy just now, but you can see him in just a few minutes."

"I came here from a smaller place," confided the girl, encouraged by Peggy. "Most of the time I have had work, but the pay has not been much more than I needed for expenses. When I have been out of work, the little that I had been saving has gone."

"It's the girls who don't have to work who make it hard for us. These girls have fathers who take care of them, but they're not satisfied with the clothes their fathers buy them, so they get jobs to earn extra money. Such girls don't expect to work long, and they perhaps don't have to pay board at home, so they work for less than I have to get to live. That makes it hard for me to get along."

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Do you think it proper for us to go home with young man who do not tell us their names?

(2) One of them asked me for a kiss. I refused, and told him that the man I marry will get my kisses. Do you think that it was right for me to say so?

(3) My friend came home with a young man. He asked her for a kiss; she refused him and he took it. She told him he was the first boy who had kissed her. He said he was sorry and asked her pardon. What is she supposed to do to give up his friendship or forgive him?

(4) I know a boy friend whom I haven't heard from for a long time. I sent him a postal card. Do you think I did right?

(5) Is it proper for me to go out with a boy friend, leaving my lady friend alone, on a Sunday night? THOMAS.

OLIVE AND EUGENIA.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a girl ten years old. My grandfather's birthday is next Sunday and will be eighty-five years old. Would like to give her a present. You think baby doll pumps would be suitable?

"VACATION ROSE."

(1) Old ladies like to wear a same kind of shoes that they have always been used to wearing. Baby doll pumps might not be so comfortable for her. I wonder if you could make something that she would like for her yourself. Is there something that she would appreciate the girl?

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Please get a few menus for a four or five course dinner party. A HOSTESS.

Menu—Cream of celery soup, roast beef, Franconia potatoes, shiraz pudding, macaroni with cheese, tomato and lettuce salad, chicken, cream of cauliflower, cream of tomato soup, fried chicken, mashed potatoes, sliced tomatoes, shell beans, shortcake, coffee.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two girls of fourteen and sixteen. We are together all the time. (1) Is it wrong for us to take walks nights, if we do not go far or stay out late?

(2) Is it wrong to take walks with boys that are nice if we don't stay out late?

(3) What color dress is good for this summer?

(4) Should we wear hair ribbons at this age?

(5) Are we to young to go with boys? TWO CHUMS.

(1) No. (2) No; but be sensible, little girls, and regard them only as friends. (3) Any color is pretty. Wear colors which are becoming. (4) Yes, you will have to lay them aside soon enough. (5) Yes, in the sense that you regard them as beaux.

Household Hint

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

To deaden the sound of a watch or clock in a sick room put it under a glass.

No matter how much dripping is needed, fish, when being fried, is very apt to stick to the pan bottom. To prevent this, before using your pan, rub a tablespoonful of dry salt into the pan well all over with grease-proof paper, and it will be found a thorough success.

THE TABLE.

Fried Tomatoes with Cream Sauce—Slice the tomatoes rather thick, dip in dry bread crumbs, and fry till tender, seasoning well with salt and pepper. Arrange the slices on a platter, remove any surplus crumbs that may be in the pan, in which a cream sauce to pour over the tomatoes. In winter canned tomatoes may be used. Strain well and use only the solid part.

Deviled Tomatoes—Mix together one tablespoon each of butter and vinegar, the mashed yolk of a hard-boiled egg, a teaspoon each of sugar and mustard, and salt and cayenne to season highly. Bring to the boil and add one egg well beaten and cook till smooth and thick. Pour over fried or boiled tomatoes.

Baked Tomatoes with Macaroni and Cheese Cream—Scald one pint cream over hot water, and add one-half pound grated cheese. When it is melted, add one-quarter cup butter, salt and paprika. Arrange one-half pound cooked macaroni in a wreath around five baked tomatoes, and pour over this the cheese cream sauce.

Escalloped Tomatoes—Mix two cups of cut tomatoes (sliced ones will do), one cup crumbs and one-third cup of grated cheese, with salt and pepper to season, and pour into a buttered baking dish. Cover with butter, grated crumbs, sprinkle with grated cheese and bake twenty minutes.

Cream Baked Tomatoes—Peel and cut in two three large tomatoes. Chop fine a green pepper and an onion, and spread over the tomatoes. Sprinkle with salt, dot with butter and bake, basting with the pan gravy. Add one-half cup cream or milk to a little butter and flour rubbed together, and pour over the tomatoes.

Sour Cream Salad Dressing—Beat two egg yolks very light, stir in gradually one-half cup of sour cream; add one-half teaspoon of salt, dash of pepper, two tablespoons of tarragon vinegar and the beaten whites of the eggs. This is fine and very simple to make.

Everyday Talks To Everyday People

BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

In a neighborhood such as abounds in every small city all over our splendor, I have lived, in houses facing each other, a quiet street, two women. Mrs. Blank's home was available for its neatness, its air of everything in its place at all times. She was wise in the affairs of house-making; an indefatigable worker; even the vegetables and flowers in her garden stood up primly as if they felt the responsibility of growing in such neat surroundings and were bravely trying to do their share in making the place what its owner intended it to be—the neatest place in the block in that section of town.

But many people who are wise in the keeping of their home; in the weeding and cultivating of their property, have not the right wisdom when it comes to cultivating their heart. They have no patience with the person who is a little lacking in the "get and go" that influences them; too desirous their well meant efforts, always arrive on the tail-end of the procession. They have that unerring intuition (is it unerring?) that catches them to gauge to a hair's breadth their neighbor's mind, heart and intentions, never forget that not one of us, no matter where we stand, and may lie, can truthfully stand up and say concerning another. For who can read another's heart; who can tell what motives prompt a man to follow the course he does?

Mrs. Blank was a self-appointed advisory board and censor to and for the neighborhood in general. Daily she kept tabs on the doings of her little world and especially she noticed its shortcomings. Anyone who is looking for defects can always find them—either in persons or things. Perfection is a reward that is handed to mortals as they are about to start on their last journey and many of us will have a hard scratch to obtain it.

Mrs. Blank was known—and feared. Mrs. Dash lived just across the way from Mrs. Blank in a house that

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—No. Father Can't Be Any Too Careful—

THE DOCTOR SAYS I MUST GO TO EUROPE FOR MY HEALTH.

Make Walls and Ceilings of BESTWALL Instead of Plaster

The owner likes Bestwall better because it protects his house from fire—keeps out cold, heat and dampness—is quickly applied—takes any kind of decoration without panels—eliminates muck and damage of plaster and possibility of its cracking, breaking, etc.—and finally, Bestwall wears as long as the house.

The contractor and carpenter prefer Bestwall because it is easier, quicker and cheaper to apply than lath and plaster. Carpenters lose no time waiting for plasterers to finish inside—job is finished when expected—no expense for a man to clean up after plasterers.

The real estate man insists on Bestwall because it improves the interior appearance of the house, minimizes repair expense, makes houses easier to sell or rent and keep rented.

The architect specifies Bestwall, too, because it enables him to carry out his wishes, and give his clients better service.

These dealers recommend Bestwall because they want to give customers greater value for their money. Ask any of them or the manufacturers for literature, sample and prices.

Europe's Armageddon and the Last War

By H. G. WELLS

A recent historical writer has described the world of that time as one that "believed in established words and was invincibly blind to the obvious in things." Certainly it seems now that nothing could have been more obvious to the people of the early twentieth century than the rapidly with which war was becoming impossible. And as certainly they did not see it. They did not see it until the atomic bombs burst in their fumbling hands. Yet the broad facts must have glared upon any intelligent mind. All through the nineteenth and twentieth centuries the amount of energy that men were able to command was continually increasing. Applied to warfare that meant that the power to inflict a blow, the power to destroy, was continually increasing. There was no increase whatever in the ability to escape. Every sort of passive defense, armor, fortifications and so forth was being outmastered by this tremendous increase on the destructive side. Destruction was becoming so facile that any little body of malcontents could use it. It was revolutionizing the problems of police and internal rule. Before the last war began it was a matter of common knowledge that a man could carry in a handbag an amount of latent energy sufficient to wreck half a city. These facts were before the minds of everybody. The children in the streets knew them. And yet the world still, as the Americans used to phrase it, "foolled around" with the paraphernalia and pretensions of war.

It is only by realizing this profound, this fantastic divorce between the scientific and intellectual movement on the one hand and the world of the lawyer-politician on the other that the men of a later time can hope to understand this preposterous state of affairs. Social organization was still in the barbaric stage. There were already great numbers of actively intelligent men and much private and commercial civilization, but the community as a whole was aimless, untrained and unorganized to the pitch of imbecility. Collective civilization, the "modern state," was still in the womb of the future.

CHAPTER V.

Intrenching in Belgian Luxembourg.

BUT let us return to Frederick Barnett's "Wander Jahre" and its account of the experiences of a common man during the war time. While these terrific disclosures of scientific possibility were happening in Paris and Berlin Barnett and his company were industriously intrenching themselves in Belgian Luxembourg.

He tells of the mobilization and of his summer's day journey through the north of France and the Ardennes in a few vivid phrases. The country was browned by a warm summer, the trees a little touched with autumnal color and the wheat already golden. When they stopped for an hour at Hiron men and women with tricolor badges upon the platform distributed cakes and glasses of beer to the thirsty soldiers, and there was much cheerfulness. "Such good, cool beer it was!" he wrote. "I had nothing to eat nor drink since Epsom."

A number of monoplanes, "like giant swallows," he notes, were scouting in the pink evening sky. Barnett's battalion was sent through the Sedan country to a place called Viron and thence to a point in the woods on the line to Jemelle. Here they detrained, bivouacked uneasily by the railway—trains and stores were passing along it all night—and next morning they marched eastward through a cold, overcast dawn and a morning, first cloudy and then blazing, over a countryside interspersed by forest toward Arlon.

There the infantry were set to work upon a line of masked entrenchments and hidden rifle pits between St. Hure and Viron that were designed to check and delay any advance from the east upon the fortified line of the Meuse. They had their orders, and for two days they worked without either a sight of the enemy, or any suspicion of the disaster that had abruptly decapitated the armies of Europe and turned the west of Paris and the center of Berlin into blazing miniatures of the destruction of Pompeii. And the news when it did come came attenuated. "We heard there had been mischief with aeroplanes and bombs in Paris," Barnett relates, "but it didn't seem to follow that they weren't still somewhere elaborating their plans and issuing orders. When the enemy began to emerge from the woods in front of us we cheered and blazed away and didn't trouble much more about anything but the battle in hand. If now and then one cocked up an eye into the sky to see what was happening there the rip of a bullet soon brought one down to the horizontal again."

That battle went on for three days all over a great stretch of country between Louvain on the north and Longwy on the south. It was essentially a rifle and infantry struggle. The aeroplanes do not seem to have taken any decisive share in the actual fighting for some days, though no doubt they affected the strategy from the first by preventing surprise movements. They were aeroplanes with atomic engines, but they were not provided with atomic bombs, which were manifestly unsuitable for field use, nor indeed had they any very effective kind of bomb. And though they maneuvered against each other and there was rifle shooting at them and between them, there was little actual aerial fighting. Either the air men were indisposed to fight or the commanders on both sides preferred to reserve these machines for scouting.

After a day or two of digging and scheming Barnett found himself in the forefront of a battle. He had made his section of rifle pits chiefly along a line of deep, dry ditch that gave a means of intercommunication. He had had the earth scattered over the adjacent field, and he had masked his preparations with tussocks of corn and poppy. The hostile advance came blindly and unexpectantly across the fields below and would have been cruelly handled indeed if some one away to the right had not opened fire too soon.

"It was a queer thrill when these fellows came into sight," he confesses, "and not a bit like maneuvers. They halted for a time on the edge of the wood and then came forward in an open line. They kept walking nearer to us and not looking at us, but away to the right of us. Even when they began to be hit and their officers' whistles woke them up, they didn't seem to see us. One or two halted to fire and then they all went back toward the wood again. They went slowly at first, looking round at us, then, the shelter of the wood seemed to draw them and they trotted. I fired rather mechanically and missed, then I fired again, and then I became earnest to hit something, made sure of my sighting and aimed very carefully at a blue back that was dodging about in the corn. At first I couldn't satisfy myself and didn't shoot, his movements were so spasmodic and uncertain, then I think he came to a ditch or some such obstacle and halted for a moment. 'Got you,' I whispered and pulled the trigger.

"I had the strangest sensations about that man. In the first instance, when I felt that I had hit him I was irradiated with joy and pride. 'I sent him spinning. He jumped and threw up his arms. Then I saw the corn tops waving and had glimpses of his flapping about. Suddenly I felt sick. I hadn't killed him.

"In some way he was disabled and smashed up and yet able to struggle about. I began to think.

"For nearly two hours that Prussian was agonizing in the corn. Either he was calling out or some one was shouting to him.

"Then he jumped up. He seemed to try and get up upon his feet with one last effort, and then he fell like a sack and lay still and never moved again. "He had been unendurable, and I believe some one had shot him dead. I had been wanting to do so for some time."

The enemy began sniping the rifle pits from shelters they made for themselves in the woods below. A man was hit in the pit next to Barnett and began cursing and crying out in a violent rage. Barnett crawled along the ditch to him and found him in great pain, covered with blood, frantic with indignation and with the half of his right hand smashed to a pulp. "Look at this!" he kept repeating, hugging it and then extending it. "D—d foolery! D—d foolery! My right hand, sir! My right hand!"

Gaining no response from Alan, he observed critically: "Chatty little customer, your are," and resumed the binoculars.

For thirty minutes nothing happened, other than that the sound of the fisherman's launch was stifled. It rested motionless in the waters, two figures mysteriously busy in the cockpit, the Seaventure's dory trailing behind it on a long painter.

Gradually these details became blurred, and were blotted out by the closing shadows. The afterglow in the west grew cool and faint. The crimson waters darkened, to mauve, to violet, to a translucent green; to blackness. Far up the coast two white eyes, peering over the horizon, stared steadily through the dark. "Chatham lights," Barcus said they were.

Abruptly he dropped the glasses and jumped up. "Hear that!" he cried.

Now the humming of the motor was again audible and growing louder with every instant; and Alan, getting to his feet in turn, infected with the excitement of Barcus, could just make out at some distance a dark shadow beneath the dim, spluttering glimmer of light, that moved swiftly and steadily toward the Seaventure.

"What the devil!" he demanded, puzzled.

"You uttered a mouthful when you said 'devil!'" Barcus commented, grasping his arm and hurrying him to the landward side of the vessel. "Quick—kick off your shoes—get set for a mile-long swim! Devil's work, all right!" he panted, hastily divesting himself of shoes and outer garments. "I couldn't make out what they were up to till I saw them lash the wheel, light the fuse, start the motor, and take to the dory. They've made on grand little torpedo boat out of that tender."

He sprang upon the rail, steadying himself with a stay. "Ready?" he asked. "Look sharp!"

By way of answer, Alan joined him; the two had dived as one, entering the water with a single splash, and coming to the surface a good ten yards from the Seaventure. For the next several seconds they were swimming frantically, and not until three hundred feet or more separated them from the schooner did either dare pause for breath or a backward glance.

Then the impact of the launch against the Seaventure's side rang out across the waters, and with a husky roar the launch blew up, spewing skywards a widespread fan of flame. Over the Seaventure, as this flamed and died, pale fire seemed to hover like a tremendous pall of phosphorescence, a weird and ghastly glare that suddenly descended to the decks. There followed a crackling noise, a sound as of the labored breathing of a giant; and bright flames, orange, crimson, violet and gold, licked out all over the schooner, from stem to stern, from deck to topmasts.

It seemed several minutes that she burned in this wise—it was probably not so long—before her decks blew up and the flames swept roaring to the sky.

By the time Alan and Barcus, swimming steadily, had gained a shoal which permitted them footing in waist-deep waters, the Seaventure had burned to the water's edge.

CHAPTER XIV.

A Double Escape.

On Nauset Beach, in the shank of a midsummer night, two men sprawled on the sands, some distance back from the water, and listened to the heavy thumping of their overtaxed hearts, and panted.

Now and again one would lift his head and stare out over the black face of the waters at a little line of reddish flames about a mile off shore, all that remained to witness to the fact that, an hour since, these two had been in command of as trim a small schooner as ever ventured the coast-wise trip from Portland to New York. As far out again shone the starboard light of a becalmed schooner, whose people had been directly responsible for the disaster which had overtaken the smaller vessel.

In the course of time, beginning to breathe with more ease, one of the two marooned gentlemen said:

"What I can't understand—anyway—is why these damned thugs out there thought we'd be asses enough to stay aboard the Seaventure and get burned up."

The other replied: "Did they?" "Looks that way—doesn't it?" If they didn't, why were we permitted to swim ashore at our elegant leisure? There was nothing to prevent their rowing round to cut us off."

"Maybe they did, at that, and missed us, Mr. Law-and-Order!" "But—"

"We were a wee mite excited—you've got to admit. It's just possible we didn't hear the noise of their oars. And it's black enough for them to have overlooked us. A man's head in the water isn't really a conspicuous object on a dark night."

"Tell me, Barcus, what's the nearest symptom of civilization?" "Chatham village," said Mr. Barcus, "six miles to the northwards, and cut off by an inlet a mile or so wide at that."

Mr. Law groaned soulfully. "Then there's the lighthouse on Monomoy point," Mr. Barcus pursued, "three miles to the south."

Mr. Law said nothing whatever to this. "Of course," his companion reflected morosely, "this had to happen in mid-summer! A month earlier we'd have had the life-saving patrol to look to for protection. But the service is suspended in June and July."

A silence commenced eloquently on this assertion, broken only when Mr. Law voiced a thought bred of long and malignant observation of the schooner's green eye:

"I'd give a deal to know who's aboard that vessel."

"You don't mean you think your regular young woman?"

"It's possible. Judith kidnapped Rose in Portland. That's not so far from Gloucester; a motor car could have caught that schooner before she sailed to waylay us, this morning. And what better way to take care of an able-bodied, full-tempered girl you've kidnapped than to ship her somewhere by sea, in the care of trustworthy hellions?"

"Don't ask me—I've done very little kidnapping for one of my years."

"For tuppence," said Mr. Law, "I'd risk a swim off to that boat and see for myself."

"For two million dollars—I would not!" Barcus affirmed with great decision.

A moment or so later the line of little flames went out altogether and unexpectedly; and the owner of the late Seaventure fancied he could hear, even at that distance, the hiss of charred and smoldering timbers sucked under and drowned out.

"Exit," he announced plaintively, "exit Seaventure," with heroic gesture. "R. I. P. a good little ship!"

Alan Law sat up, abstractedly scrubbing a crust of sand from his cheeks and commented soulfully: "Oh—damn!"

Sick Women Attention

Is it possible there is a woman in this country, who continues to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, which proves beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other one medicine in the world?

We have published in the newspapers of the United States more genuine testimonial letters than have ever been published in the interest of any other medicine for women—and every year we publish many new testimonials, all genuine and true. Here are three never before published:

From Mrs. S. T. Richmond, Providence, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—"For the benefit of women who suffer as I have done I wish to state what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I did some heavy lifting and the doctor said it caused a displacement. I have always been weak and I overworked after my baby was born and inflammation set in, then nervous prostration, from which I did not recover until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The Compound is my best friend and when I hear of a woman with troubles like mine I try to induce her to take your medicine."—Mrs. S. T. Richmond, 199 Waldo Street, Providence, R. I.

A Minister's Wife Writes:

CLOQUET, MINN.—"I have suffered very much with irregularities, pain and inflammation, but your wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has made me well and I can recommend the same to all who are troubled with these complaints."—Mrs. JENNIE ABERMAN, c/o Rev. K. ABERMAN, Cloquet, Minnesota.

From Mrs. J. D. Murdoch, Quincy, Mass.

SOUTH QUINCY, MASS.—"The doctor said that I had organic trouble and he doctored me for a long time and I did not get any relief. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and I tried it and found relief before I had finished the first bottle. I continued, taking it all through middle life and am now a strong, healthy woman and earn my own living."—Mrs. JANE D. MURDOCH, 25 Gordon St., South Quincy, Mass.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

RESULTS OF TARIFF BY WINFIELD JONES

Washington Correspondent Explains Administration and Effects of New Tariff After One Year. (Special to the Gazette.) (By Winfield Jones.)

Washington, D. C., September 8.—What is the Wilson-Underwood democratic tariff doing?

From all sources come complaints of dissatisfaction with the results that the new tariff act is producing, while the primary object for which it was enacted, the reduction of the high cost of living, has not been accomplished the slightest. After a year's trial, the cost of living is higher than ever, the meaning statistics previous to the outbreak of the European war are beginning to show a decided increase in exports, the record for May being $200,000,000 more than for the corresponding month of last year, while during the same month this year our exports decreased by over $200,000,000. Both of these items are a way an explanation of our idle stores, ships, and manufacturing industries that has resulted in our increasing army of unemployed. A concrete example of new tariff conditions, as far as marine supply houses are concerned, was recently given in the bids for installing a 100-horsepower engine in the Rache Trust-Shell-Lake Boat Building Company.

A German firm was the lowest bidder for this engine, underestimating the lowest American bidder only $200. A protest in favor of the American bidders in Cambridge, Mass., was lodged with the Treasury department by congressman Roberts of Massachusetts. Considering the difference in the cost of labor, however, in this country with that prevailing in Germany, the wonder is that there should be so little difference in the two bids. A tariff that protects foreign manufacturers to compete with Americans in the same line of business as in this case is radically wrong, and the American skilled laborer will doubtless record his objection to such by his vote next November.

For the United States the first lesson of the war is that it must not abandon the sound protective policy which is designed to make it sufficient to itself.

The tariff policy of the United States is based on the supposition that there is always to be peace and that the avenues of trade are to be continually open. War has come, disrupting all commerce with Europe. It has deprived our manufacturers of material without which they cannot operate. Some have already closed and others must shut down unless it is found to obtain the needed materials.

The democrats at Washington should come to their senses in time to prevent further disaster. If they allow a reversal of themselves on the question of principle they can easily turn about face on the question of policy. The country is confronted with a serious falling off in the revenue from the tariff because of the cessation of imports. Sugar, however, is obtainable from countries with which trade can be maintained. If only for the purpose of conserving the revenue, therefore, the sugar duties should be restored at once.

This is done, the revenue of $50,000,000 produced will cover nearly 50 percent of the apprehended deficit. Moreover, a protective tariff preserves the prosperity and industry of Louisiana and will encourage the best sugar growers to continue to produce their valuable crop for the supply of the home market.

FOOD FACTS.

What an M. D. Learned.

A prominent Georgia physician went through a food experience which he has published.

It was my own experience that led me to advocate Grape-Nuts, and I also know, from having described it to convalescents and weak patients, that the food is a wonderful re-builder and restorer of the brain and tissue, as well as a tonic. It improves the digestion, and sick patients gain very rapidly, as I did in strength and weight, and was in such a low state that I gave up my work entirely, and to the mountains of this state, two months there did not improve in fact, I was not quite as well as I left home.

I began to use Grape-Nuts food in two weeks I could walk a mile without fatigue, and in five weeks returned to my home and practice, taking hard work again. Since that I have felt as well and strong as I did in my life.

As a physician who seeks to help sufferers, I consider it a duty to state these facts publicly. Name of Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

At 10 days of Grape-Nuts, when the food does not seem to sustain you, work wonders. "There's reason."

Look in pkgs. for the famous little "The Road to Wellville."

Read the above letter? A new appears from time to time. They are genuine, true and full of human rest.
